One day a wolf named Acorn was swimming in a lake nearby her den. She was called Acorn because her fur was the color of an acorn.

She swam for four hours. It started getting dark so Acorn went home. First Acorn passed the five pine trees. Then she smelled a stinky skunk. She was almost home.

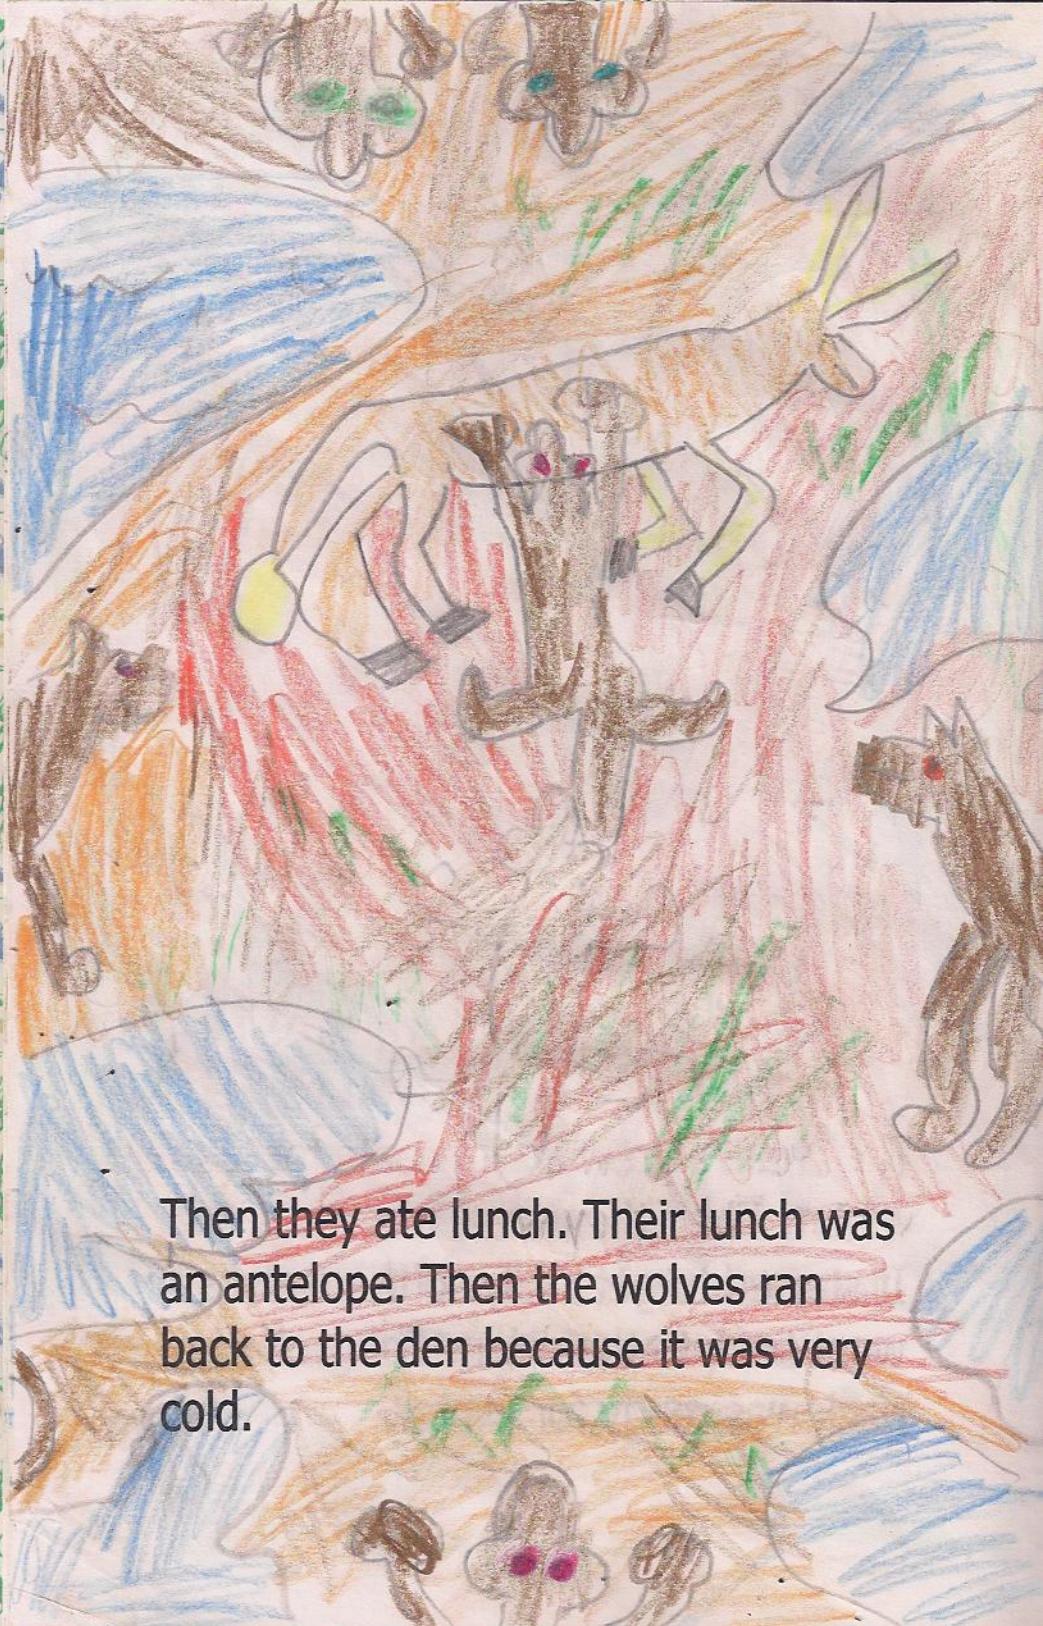

Then she started running to her den.
She ran for a minute. Then she got back to her den. Acorn was very, very sleepy. So her wolf pack went to bed.

The next day they went to hunt for food. Acorn caught a zebra, then they ate their breakfast. It was the last day of fall so all the wolves went swimming in the lake nearby their den.

It started to get chilly so the wolves went back to their den. The wolf pack was ready for winter.

Then they ate lunch. Their lunch was an antelope. Then the wolves ran back to the den because it was very cold.

The wolves grew warm coats for the winter. Then they went to bed. After a long winter Acorn was happy because it was spring and her birthday was coming up.

Her birthday was March 17th. She was going to be four years old. Acorn could smell flowers growing all around.

Twelve days passed. Acorn's pack had all the birthday and St. Patrick's day decorations up.

Acorn's birthday was very near.
Acorn was excited. Three more days had passed and tomorrow was Acorn's birthday.

The next day Acorn had a great birthday. And from that day on Acorn had a great life.
